

Selander O'Brien Law Firm Rolls Out Redesigned Web Site in Seattle

Web Site Offers Helpful Resources For Washington Families

Seattle, Washington (PRWEB) September 2, 2009 -- To better serve Washington families that need legal help recovering from personal injuries, Selander O'Brien PLLC, a respected Seattle law firm, has unveiled a redesigned Web site.

"Every day, we assist people who are going through traumatic times in their lives through no fault of their own," said Kenneth Selander Jr., of Selander O'Brien PLLC. "People who have been injured in a serious accident need a place where they can get some basic information about the laws and clear answers to common questions. This redesigned website --personalinjuryWashington.com--offers a good start."

The site can be viewed at <http://www.personalinjurywashington.com/>.

Selander says the updated site reflects the law firm's emphasis on assisting clients in whatever way possible.

The site features new menu items detailing the firm's areas of practice: personal injury, vehicle accidents including boat, motorcycle, bicycle and scooter mishaps, the medical area of gadolinium MRI dye, insurance bad faith, nursing home abuse and wrongful death. Under personal injury, for example, are breakout tabs on construction accidents, catastrophic injury, day care injury, food contamination, toy safety, dog bites, and burns.

The Web site addresses commonly asked questions about consulting a lawyer, and the home page contains a link to the firm's illustrative cases as well as a rotating panel of client testimonials.

Site visitors will find several user-friendly ways to contact Selander O'Brien PLLC, including a click-to-call tab, an online contact form and questionnaires to facilitate a consultation.

Raleigh, N.C.-based Consultwebs.com Inc., a leader in the development of Web sites for law firms, handled the redesign.
